SWISS WHITE WINES

SWISS NEUCHATEL (Shipped by G. Clotru Fils)	Bottle	Case
SWISS NEUCHATEL	.69	15.50

This beautiful dry white wine from Switzerland has won many enthusiastic friends since it was introduced during the summer. It was rightfully considered good value in June when it sold for $2.25 a bottle. At this amazing price, it should be irresistible.

JAMES BEARD REPORTS

ON FRANCE'S RESTAURANTS AND VINEYARDS

Editor's Note: Many of you are familiar with the food and wine writings of our associate, James Beard. His recent work, 'The Fireside Cook Book,' has just been published by Simon & Schuster. The first edition of 80,000 copies has already been sold out before publication. A new edition will shortly be forthcoming. Mr. Beard has just returned from a wine and food tour of France's vineyards and restaurants. His account follows.

ON a pleasant morning in September, ten of us stepped into a bus chartered for the occasion and whirled away out of Paris. The Paris Herald Tribune reported that there were eight stout and two slim members of the group. We can account for one slim one, but the second remained a mystery to the very end.

The tour was originally conceived by Henri Beaugard, the French Commercial Counselor in San Francisco, who felt that the Wine and Food Societies of the United States should find out at first hand what the vineyards of France have to offer. It resulted in ten of us, each interested in wine and food, but otherwise of different interests and professions, touring through the Valley of the Loire, Bordeaux, the Valley of the Rhone, Burgundy, Alsace, and the Champagne district. For 24 consecutive days of the tour, we tasted, dined, and questioned wine growers, distillers, chefs and restaurateurs. That we all came through it happy and contented, and eager for more, is a credit to our digestive apparatus, and our capacities as tasters. The journey through the French countryside was prefaced by ten days in Paris which were, as I look back upon them, as delightful as any ten days I've ever spent.

Paris

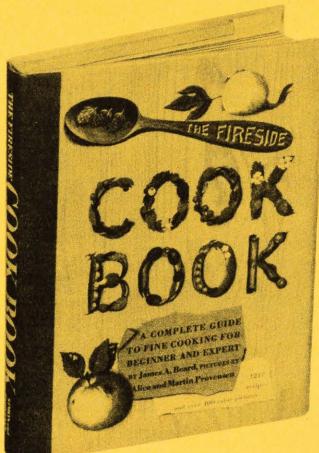

HERE are some of the memories that remain with me . . . the perpetual beauty of the city, especially in September with Fall flowers, and the early Autumnal colors creeping into the leaves . . . the joy of Parisian restaurants where one seems able to find perfection in the large and the small ones alike, and where every morsel of food seems to taste better. My favorites—well, that is a hard job—but let me jot down a few. To me the two greatest are Laperouse and Maxim's . . . small places such as Allard, Restaurant de la Boule d'Or and La Savoie, where one dines fantastically well . . . the delight of dining out of doors in such places as Coq Hardy, La Mediterranee . . . memorable times with the Dolfi family whose remarkable Eau-de-Vie de Framboise and Mirabelle are becoming more and more known in this country . . . the exciting tasting and luncheon arranged by M. Vaudable of Maxim's for Jeanne Owen, the executive secretary of the Wine and Food Society . . . the enlightening gastronomical map of Paris compiled by Alexander Watt of Paris Vogue which is the perfect guide for anyone who wishes to find the top restaurants in Paris. The ten days passed all too quickly and soon we were headed South for the Loire Valley.

Loire Valley

THREE days in the Loire Valley gave us a chance to taste a goodly variety of the wines of this particular vicinity, many of which are unknown in this country. The delightful white wine known as Sancerre, which combines so well with fish and shellfish, is one of these. Another wine, little known, but which has great charm and character, is a Pouilly Fume. Both of these are unusual in this district because they are of a quality of dryness which one customarily associates with a Burgundy or Cotes du Rhone. Neither are of great stature, but both are pleasantly refreshing and exhilarating to the palate.

A day of tasting in the Vouvray section followed. Here we found it not easy to taste numerous sparkling wines, all of which have sweet overtones. One must sip water or eat a piece of dry bread in between in order to get the full value from the wines. A magnificent luncheon served in a clubroom hollowed out of rock, gave us an opportunity to sample eight or nine wines along with food—and food of the region which made it doubly valuable.

SHERRY WINE AND SPIRITS CO., Inc. • 679 MADISON AVENUE • TEMpleton 8-7500

It is possible to taste wines for their relative values as wines, but to taste them accompanied with the foods which they enhance or with dishes which are chosen as suitable backgrounds for the wines is quite another thing.

From Vouvray we journeyed on to Saumur where we tasted some of the truly great wines of that district, particularly a remarkably good vin rose de Saumur which is made principally from Cabernet grape. We were impressed by the firm of Ackerman-Laurance whose Dry Royal may be familiar to you. Its proprietor Baron de Luze was leaving the following day for his 72nd trip across the Atlantic, which is, perhaps, something of a record. On to Anjou where we met M. Rossignol, whose Anjou Rose is well known to many of you.

Cognac

WE headed Southwest and arrived at the little town of Cognac where the world's greatest brandies are made. We enjoyed inspecting two of the biggest distilleries in the district—Martell and Hennessy. At dinner, Mr. Hennessey stressed that America drinks considerably less Cognac now than before prohibition and startled us with the information that Venezuela imports more Cognac than the entire United States. Among the drinks we tasted here was Pineau de Charente which they are trying to popularize, but I found this mixture of Cognac and wine a little sweet and undistinguished.

The World's Wine Capitol

BORDEAUX, the Mecca of wine-lovers, was next on our itinerary. The first night three of us stole away to the Chapon Fin for a little private tasting of our own. The Chapon Fin has been one of the best known restaurants in France for many years and their cellar is one of the finest in the world. The food, however, is no longer what it was, but it was worth the trip to linger over some of the great wines one seldom finds on any other list. We chose a 1934 Chateau Haut Simard purely out of curiosity and were well repaid; Chateau Ausone of 1928 and 1929, the Cheval Blanc of 1920, all of noble stature. Then a magnum of Chateau Margaux 1915 which was old and tired, and appeared feeble after the others. And finally an 1878 Armagnac, climaxing an evening of wine tasting that may come only once or twice in a lifetime.

Bits From Bordeaux

SAMPLED a host of 1947 and 1948 wines from the cask, and 1945's from the bottle. Many Bordeaux growers look to their 1945's, and I agree with them, as the greatest vintage year since 1929 for their red wines. A few favor the 1947's. There is little question about the glory of the 1947 White Bordeaux, with 1945 again appearing as its closest competition . . . the dryness and delicacy of Chateau Haut Brion 1947 was reminiscent of a superb White Burgundy rather than typical of Bordeaux . . . we almost all agreed that Chateau Margaux was one of the best kept cellars we had yet visited . . . the superb dinner given in the great banquet hall of Chateau Mouton Rothschild by Baron Philippe de Rothschild in honor of our party. We tasted with reverence the jeroboams of Chateau Mouton Rothschild 1923 and the Imperiales of 1881, both astoundingly great . . . the architectural beauty of Chateau Yquem and the superb quality of the 1929 which was served us by the Marquis de Lur Saluces, its proprietor . . . the discovery that St. Emilion is famous for its macaroons as well as its wine.

Southern France

OUR first stop in the Rhone Valley was the colorful town of Chateauneuf du Pape. Here, at the restaurant "La Mule du Pape" we encountered some of the best dining of our tour and certainly the best we experienced in Southern France. A superb Souffle Grand Marnier (we cannot resist repeating the recipe below) was accompanied by a most unusual white wine, Chateauneuf du Pape Blanc.

GRAND MARNIER SOUFFLE

Melt 4 tablespoons butter, add 2 tablespoons flour, and cook until the mixture starts to color. Gradually add 1 cup rich hot milk, stirring constantly, and cook for about 5 minutes. Stir in 4 egg yolks, beaten with 4 tablespoons sugar and $\frac{1}{4}$ cup Grand Marnier. Cool and then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of 6 eggs. Pour mixture into buttered souffle dish and bake in a moderate oven 350° F. for 45 minutes. Serve immediately.

And then a sentimental journey to the vineyards of Clos de Chante Aloutte, which has long been one of my favorite wines (there is still some of the 1937 remaining in Sherry's cellar) . . . lunch with M. Chapoutier, a wine grower of high integrity, which was made memorable by one of his wines, Hermitage Rouge, Clos de Sizeranne 1929.

Beaujolais

FROM Lyon we travel on into the Beaujolais district — and get several opinions about chilling a Beau-

jolais slightly. At the world-famed Restaurant De La Pyramide, Monsieur Point served us what is probably the finest Beaujolais I have ever had and it was chilled—I asked several of the men we visited in Beaujolais and found some agreeing, others that it should be served at cellar temperature—which is around 55 degrees . . . the horror of drinking a warm sparkling wine from the Beaujolais district at nine in the morning at a Chamber of Commerce reception.

World's Greatest Vineyards

THE beautiful ride from Macon to Beaune and the great joy of seeing the famous vineyards . . . the wonder that such small plots of ground can produce such magnificence in quantities large enough to provide us with the needed amount of the great wines the world desires . . . the glories of the landscape with the rolling hills and the almost geometric patterns that rows of vines create—the legendary old world quality of Beaune . . . the surprise to find the 47 wines as brilliant and drinkable as they are, even some of the reds are utterly delicious at this point and the whites seem completely mature. The magnificence of the great Hospice de Beaune, which is still used as a hospital and which retains much of its original medieval woodwork and many of the original appointments. A visit to the cellars of the Hospice where the '49 were being brought in . . . The elegance of Burgundian food . . . The delicacy of the Meursault—Genevrières 1946 and the grandeur of a 1929 Demoiselle — Montrachet. The latter served with a brochette baked in puff paste. At the same dinner a really majestic Nuits St. Georges "Chateau Gris," 1929 served with a perfectly roasting pheasant . . . the fun of comparing a Batard-Montrachet of 1947 vintage with a Grand-Montrachet of 1904, which was in many ways the most remarkable wine we tasted . . . a visit to Romanee-Conti and a bit of sadness when I thought that there would be none of this glorious wine for a number of years, since the vineyard was replanted after the 1945 harvest . . . the historic old press at Clos Vougeot and the almost hallowed atmosphere at the same place . . . Dijon. The home of mustard and mustard products and really good Burgundian cooking.

ROAST TURKEY WITH BRAZIL NUT STUFFING

Prepare turkey for the oven and fill with the following stuffing:

Saute 10 shallots, finely chopped, in $\frac{1}{4}$ pound butter, and when they are lightly colored, add $\frac{1}{4}$ pound smoked ham, finely ground, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup chopped parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, and $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon each thyme and freshly ground pepper. Blend the mixture with 4 cups zwieback crumbs or toasted bread crumbs, 2 whole eggs, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup Madeira, and $\frac{2}{3}$ cup coarsely chopped brazil nuts. Mix thoroughly, and adjust the seasoning.

Grease the skin of the turkey with a light coating of butter, wrap the bird in aluminum foil and bake in a 350° oven for 20 minutes per pound. Remove the foil from the turkey $\frac{1}{2}$ hour before it is finished roasting to allow it to brown.

PEAS WITH WHITE ONIONS

Peel small white onions, parboil them in salted water and drain. Add 1 or 2 packages frozen peas, according to your needs, and cook according to the directions on the package. Add 2 tablespoons butter, salt and pepper to taste.

SWEET POTATO CROQUETTES

For 6 servings, cook 3 large sweet potatoes in boiling water until tender. Peel and mash them with $\frac{1}{3}$ teaspoon salt and the yolks of 2 eggs. Add 2 tablespoons sherry or Madeira and flavor with a little cinnamon. Cool and then form into croquettes. Beat 2 egg whites until foamy. Dip the croquettes in flour, then in the egg whites, and finally roll them in shredded almonds. Fry in hot fat ($375^{\circ}\text{F}.$) until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper.

WARM PUMPKIN PIE BLAZED WITH KIRSCH

Beat thoroughly with rotary beater, or better still combine in a blender, 2 cups pumpkin puree, canned or fresh, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, $\frac{2}{3}$ cup brown sugar, $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon ginger, $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt and 1 cup milk. If blender is used, the ingredients will have to be thoroughly mixed and $\frac{1}{2}$ the quantity blended at a time. Stir in 2 beaten eggs and 1 cup heavy cream. Pour into unbaked pie shell, sprinkle the top with cinnamon and bake in a 325° oven for 50 minutes. Serve while still warm from the oven. Pour over the pie 2 ounces Kirsch and take blazing to the table.

Champagne

OUR stay in Champagne was all too short, though we did cover a great deal of territory. There were many things to remember . . . the showmanship displayed in the Pommery cellars . . . the interesting and enlightening visit to Hautvilliers Abbey where Dom Perignon is supposed to have discovered the champagne process . . . the incredible difference in tasting the press from the grapes and the finished and bottled Champagne . . . the utter magnificence of the 1929 Bollinger Brut which was offered us by Madame Bollinger when we visited her home and cellars . . . the delightful luncheon offered in the home of Comte Bertrand de Vogue by the Syndicate . . . and so back to Paris with all of us in fine condition and ready and willing for more tasting.

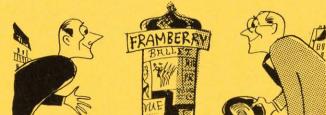

Random Notes:

THE nostalgia generated among our older clients as they view the moustache cups, theatre posters and stock market quotations dating back half century, now on view in our "Gay Nineties" window . . . congratulations to our Jack Aaron on his initiation into the inner circles of the Confrerie de Chevaliers du Tastevin during his recent trip to France . . . those of you who may have visited the Riviera are familiar with the charming pink wines of nearby Provence. One of the best, Chateau de Saint-Martin 1945, will reach our cellars by December 1st. At $1.24 the bottle, it will surely be a best seller . . . more and more, the red wines of the Rhone Valley are being appreciated. Try the Chapoutier Chateauneuf du Pape, Les Grandes Serres 1937 ($2.29) and you will agree . . . Alsace gives us the lightest of the pink wines; the charming Vin Gris of Domaine Dopff at $1.72 is well worth trying . . . a fresh supply of Croyden 1943 Champagne splits has just arrived from France. Since they are only $.98 each, you can add much gaiety to your holiday entertaining without seriously denting the budget . . . it sounds unbelievable but it's true! A topflight Spanish Sherry, Encanto Amontillado at only $1.29 the bottle . . . a tip—choose your holiday red wines early and let them rest before drinking . . .

A Bit of Paris For You

WE can't resist telling about this one! Before November ends, we will receive a small shipment of delightful replicas of the Parisian kiosk. Each one handpainted in France — displaying the typical posters, Bal Tabarin, Maxim's, etc.; each one holding an exciting wild strawberry liqueur, Dolfi Framberry from Alsace. Believe us, you will find it irresistible for your home or as a Christmas Gift item. (8.00 the bottle, including kiosk): A word to the wise—reserve yours now.

1947	Great	Very Great	Great	Very Great	Great	Very Great	Very Great	1947

NOTE: There is some poor wine made in the best of vintage years, and there is also some good wine made when the vintage is, generally speaking a failure. Hence one should pay more attention to the quality of the wine in the bottle than to the vintage year.
